St James's
PICCADILLY

WELCOME TO ST JAMES'S PICCADILLY

I still remember the first time I walked through the doors of St James's. Like many people who come here for the first time, I had no idea quite what to expect.

St James's is a church in the middle of Piccadilly, but it has never felt like a place that belongs to just one kind of person. Walk through the doors and you might encounter someone lighting a candle, a visitor quietly taking in the architecture, musicians rehearsing, a group sharing food, someone coming in for a service, or a conversation about social justice, art or the world around us. It is this sense of possibility that makes St James's such a special place.

Our community is wonderfully varied. Some people have been coming here for decades; others have only just discovered us. Some are deeply rooted in Christian faith, while others are questioning, exploring or simply curious. There are artists, musicians, campaigners, volunteers, students, visitors, neighbours and people who have found their way here because they needed somewhere to belong.

And then there is the Christmas season, when all of these different threads seem to come together. The church fills with music and candlelight, familiar stories are heard again, and people come through our doors for all sorts of reasons: tradition, hope, curiosity, or simply because they are searching for something.

As the Communications Officer, I spend much of my time telling people what is happening at St James's. But Christmas is a good reminder that what makes this place special cannot always be captured in a What's On listing. It is found in the encounters, conversations, music, creativity, welcome and acts of kindness that happen here every day.

So, whether you have been part of St James's for years or are opening this brochure because you have never been through our doors before, I hope you will find something here that draws you in.

CHRISTMAS FOR ALL: A PLACE FOR EVERYONE

Christmas is a story of welcome: a family searching for shelter, a child born with nowhere to stay, and hope found in an unexpected place.

Today, too many people in London are still looking for somewhere safe, welcoming and supportive.

At St James's, our doors are open to everyone. Every week, people experiencing homelessness, loneliness, financial hardship, displacement and social exclusion come to us for food, practical support, mental health support, friendship and community.

No referral. No appointment. No proof of eligibility. Just a welcome.

From community activities to free cultural events, music and shared experiences, St James's creates opportunities for people to connect with others and take an active part in community life.

The impact reaches far beyond any one programme. Someone who arrives for a meal may discover counselling or a community group. Someone seeking practical support may find friendship and a sense of belonging. By responding to the whole person, rather than just one immediate need, we can help people move from crisis towards stability, connection and hope.

Your gift helps provide food and practical support, counselling and wellbeing services, support for refugees and people seeking asylum, and opportunities for people to find friendship, connection and belonging.

It also helps keep the church open, support the people who make this work possible and ensure we can respond when new needs emerge.

Give this Christmas and help make St James's a place for everyone.

The Sixteen, Christmas for All Gala Concert 2025

THE SIXTEEN AT ST JAMES'S

St James's Piccadilly has long been a place where music, creativity and community come together. Now, a new chapter in that story is beginning as we welcome The Sixteen, one of the world's leading vocal ensembles, as our special choir in residence.

In partnership with the Genesis Foundation, The Sixteen has established its first permanent London home at St James's. The five-year partnership builds on a relationship that has grown through performances and creative projects since 2019, including the annual choral festival Sounds Sublime and a BBC Radio 3 Choral Evensong featuring the voices of Genesis Sixteen.

Known as the 'artists' church', St James's has a rich musical heritage. Its clear acoustics and intimate setting have provided a home for musical excellence for centuries, with associations including Handel, Purcell, Haydn and Mendelssohn. The arrival of The Sixteen brings this tradition into the present, creating new opportunities for audiences, musicians and our wider community.

The partnership is about much more than performances. Together, we are committed to making outstanding choral music accessible to as many people as possible, while nurturing the next generation of musicians. The programme includes new choral commissions, four choral evensongs each year, performances by The Sixteen, Genesis Sixteen and Genesis Sixteen Alumni, and the continuation of Sounds Sublime.

Alongside performances, the partnership will create opportunities for learning and participation within the parish, including support for Genesis Sixteen, The Sixteen's free young artists' programme for 18 to 23-year-olds, and its Ignite learning programme.

As our historic building undergoes restoration through the Wren Project, the partnership will continue at St Pancras Church, Euston Road, before returning to St James's.

At the heart of this collaboration is a shared belief that music belongs to everyone. As The Sixteen's founder and conductor Harry Christophers puts it, the aim is to introduce choral music to people of "all ages, all cultures, faiths and backgrounds".

VISITING ST JAMES'S

St James's is open to everyone. You'll find us at 197 Piccadilly, London W1J 9LL, just a five-minute walk from both Green Park and Piccadilly Circus Tube stations. The church is open Monday to Saturday and on Sundays, with services and events throughout the week.

There is step-free access to the church from both Piccadilly and Jermyn Street, with wheelchair spaces available in the main body of the church.

An accessible toilet is also available. Large-print orders of service are provided for our Sunday and Tuesday Eucharists, and a hearing loop is available in the church.

We want St James's to be a place where everyone can belong. If you have access requirements or would like to discuss how we can support your visit, please get in touch before you come.

PAST, PRESENT, FUTURE

From my study window which looks out onto Piccadilly here in central London, I can see the Christmas lights from the moment they go up. Angels fly down Piccadilly and the cold dark nights are lit up by the energy of those angels until Christmas Day itself. I've served as Rector at St James's since late 2010, so have some incredibly special memories of Christmases from past years. Sitting with our homeless guests on Christmas Day in the church hall enjoying turkey with all the trimmings for years, and then holding outdoor carol singing socially distanced in the Piccadilly courtyard, and hosting online cabarets during the pandemic among them. But some of the best memories are of the stories that surface around Christmas; happy and sad in equal measure.

On Christmas Day, we open St James's for lunch and serve whoever comes – visitors, tourists, strangers, friends. One of the oldest members of our congregation, whose impoverished childhood in Antigua was often on her mind, came for lunch on Christmas Day the year before she died. She lived alone in a small flat in west London but for as long as she was able, got on the tube and came to church every Sunday for more than twenty years. On this particular Christmas Day, although she and I didn't know it would be her last, we danced in the aisle after lunch, before her ride back home in a rare cab. I can still see her face beaming and her stick waving to the beat as she twirled (carefully), always elegant. On that day, she greeted startled visitors, aimed her stick at unsuspecting tourists, welcomed absolutely everyone from every corner of London, every continent of the world and got them dancing, for a moment forgetting themselves and joining in. This coming year, is the last year before the church building closes temporarily for refurbishment. And so it will be extra special to gather in this historic and familiar place to sing the old songs and learn some new ones too. 2026 is the first year of St James's five year partnership with the vocal ensemble The Sixteen, and so the season, always a rich musical time, will be enhanced by the young voices of Genesis Sixteen alongside the professionals, broadcast on Classic FM this year for the first time too. Each year we commission a composer to write a new carol for our gala concert and I look forward to the thrill of hearing music that I know no one in the world has ever heard before. I love the creativity of that moment, when composer, players, singers and audience are together for the first - and only - time. It seems ordinary but in fact if you think about it it's amazing: the cooperation, collaboration, generosity and kindness of those moments in a public place like St James's are precious and I never take them for granted.

As for the future, Christmas, at its heart, seems to me to be an increasingly important festival to celebrate together, across faiths and backgrounds, as a counter to some of the excesses and inequalities of human society as we've shaped it. For St James's, next Christmas will be different as our building will be temporarily closed. We'll hold some Christmas events in the area but not at the church. Our congregations on Sundays and for the Christmas services will gather at St Pancras Church Euston Road, opposite Euston station just three stops on the Victoria line, and everyone will be welcome there! I'm so looking forward to raising the roof with the old familiar story of the birth of Jesus in a stable far from home. And we'll do it there as here; with trumpets, bells, carols and choirs, with the nativity scene at the heart of it all. I love Christmas because it reminds me of the best of humanity, who are, as Christians would say, made in the image of God. Christmas is not just for Christians: it's a time when even in the London crowds that can be so lonely, we make a strong statement – together - that generosity and selflessness are at the heart of building just and peaceful human community. Christmas teaches us that life-changing hope can be found in the unlikelyst of places. And for our hurting world, anxious, fractious and unequal, it's a message of peace and goodwill that radiates even in the bleakest of places. As our Scripture says, the light shines so brightly that no darkness can overcome it. Come and be part of it, whatever your own background or belief, if you've never been to a Christmas event before or if you have been coming for decades: we'd absolutely love to see you.

The Revd Lucy Winkett - Rector

BEHIND THE CHRISTMAS LIGHTS

There is something about St James's at Christmas that makes you realise just how many different reasons people have for walking through its doors. Some come for the music and the candles, some because they have been coming for years, and some simply because they are passing through Piccadilly and are curious. As a volunteer, you never quite know who you are going to meet.

That is one of the things I love most about being part of St James's. On one shift you might find yourself talking about the history of this beautiful Wren church with visitors from the other side of the world; on another, you are helping someone find a seat for a service or simply making them feel that they are welcome here.

I have learnt that welcoming people is rarely just about having the right information. It is about paying attention. It is noticing when someone looks uncertain and offering help, or recognising that someone wants to know more and taking the time to have a conversation.

The encounters can be wonderfully unexpected. Welcomers have found themselves discussing William Blake with poetry enthusiasts sheltering from the rain, helping visitors trace family connections to St James's, and answering questions about the Grinling Gibbons carvings. There are also the moments that make you smile, like two visitors arriving with enormous suitcases and an intense determination to see the church's famous woodwork.

But perhaps the best part of volunteering is the people you volunteer alongside. A shift shared with another volunteer can become a chance to catch up, discover something new about each other or simply enjoy being part of something together.

At Christmas, that sense of community feels particularly strong. The church becomes busy with carols, concerts and services, and behind all the beautiful music and candlelight are the people who help make everyone feel at home. For me, that is what keeps bringing me back. Volunteering at St James's is a small gift of time, but it connects you to something much bigger: a community built around welcome, generosity and the belief that everyone should have a place here.

THE CARAVAN

For more than 40 years, a small green caravan in the courtyard of St James's has offered something that can be surprisingly difficult to find in a busy city: someone who will stop, listen and give you time.

The Caravan is a free drop-in counselling and emotional support service, run by the Centre for Counselling & Psychotherapy Education (CCPE) in partnership with St James's. It has been part of the life of the church since 1982, welcoming anyone who needs a conversation, without judgement and without the need to make an appointment.

Sometimes, people simply need a little human warmth and a chance to talk. For others, a brief conversation can be the beginning of something deeper. The Caravan offers a safe and confidential space to talk about whatever is troubling you, from loneliness and anxiety to relationships, loss or the challenges of everyday life.

Open seven days a week, the service is staffed by volunteers who are undergoing professional accredited counselling training. Sessions can last between 20 and 50 minutes, depending on the circumstances, and people can return regularly, seeing the same volunteer if they wish. For those who want to explore things further, an ongoing counselling relationship may also be possible.

The service also extends beyond the courtyard, with a dedicated phone counselling service available every day. The Caravan Phone Counselling Service can be reached on 020 7183 1802, every day 10am-7pm.

At Christmas, when the emphasis is often on celebration and togetherness, it is important to remember that this can also be a difficult or lonely time for many people. The Caravan is one of the ways St James's keeps its doors open to those who need somewhere to turn, not just at Christmas but throughout the year.

During the Wren Project, when St James's closes for restoration, The Caravan will relocate temporarily to St Pancras Church on Euston Road.

We also hope to develop additional counselling provision within the parish, ensuring that this vital ministry of listening and support continues to grow.

NEXT CHRISTMAS, WE'LL BE SOMEWHERE NEW

There's something rather poignant about this Christmas. After more than 340 Christmases at the heart of Piccadilly, this will be our last Christmas at St James's for a little while.

So, in the spirit of Christmas, let's make it one to remember: one more unforgettable Christmas at St James's before our journey continues elsewhere.

The Wren Project is already underway, and after Easter 2027, St James's will close for a major programme of restoration and renewal. The church will reopen fully in 2029 with a restored historic interior, more flexible spaces, improved accessibility and a renewed garden and courtyard.

But the church is not disappearing. We're going on pilgrimage.

During the closure, our congregation will make a new home at our partner church, St Pancras Euston Road. It's a partnership with deep roots: more than 11,000 people connected with St James's were buried in what is now the Euston area, and today our two churches are working together to build a shared future.

Christmas will be part of that journey. We'll gather at St Pancras to worship, celebrate and continue being the community we have always been. Some of our creative programme of music, art, talks and spoken word will also move to St Pancras and other venues, keeping the creative spirit of St James's very much alive.

So make the most of this Christmas. Sing the carols. Light the candles. Take in the Wren interior. Meet old friends and make new ones. Linger a little longer. Look around and remember the people, stories, celebrations and countless Christmases that have made this place home.

It may be our last Christmas at St James's for a little while, but it is certainly not the end of our story.

Next Christmas, we'll celebrate together at St Pancras.

And in 2029, we'll come home.

Lunchtime Recital at St Pancras,
Euston Road.
